reposition based on scientific principles spen to all, and the upsets in scores can se traced to this. The coach has spread hese principles from coast to coast.
Because of the coach many small colsess have defeated the two post musters of Eastern football.—Tate and Pennsylsania—and similar results have hapsend everywhere. And because of him

Buch results, although we are slow to satural. The large universities developed foetball, therefore they were first to study its principles. As the game grew in favor their graduates as coaches spread its gospel throughout the land

the small college is it including able to secure competent coaches, and with them came the upsets which astonished the football world. There is no reason why the material for the small team should not equal that of the large one. In fact, the small college graduate is usually more loyal than the university alumnus and will make a greater effort to have premising players enter his alma mater.

Quality Biggest Pactor.

Quality Bingest Pactor.

Fielding H. Yost of Michigan stated lest year that the coach who had fifteen good men was in a position to whip any sam, regardless of the size of the institution it played. In short, that quality not quantity counted.

In this struggle between the large and small colleges for football supremacy there is but one factor in favor of the first, and that is a conching staff in pike of the individual coach. The small college must hold to the one coach idea for financial reasons. While the former is preferable, there have been sufficient victories won by the one coach plan to prove its worth.

In the staff of coaches idea the head coach must boss the job and see that his ideas are carried out by his assistants. He has little time for actually coaching players. His duty is to map the campaign in advance of each day and then see that each assistant carries out his ideas watching their work so that it will fit in with the scheme of team play and development. He is as folish as the superintendent of a stell mill who gives his time to detail work if he devotes his afternoons to individual instruction. Such a system of coaching must be scientifically managed. Yau and Pennsylvania failed because it was not.

this plan is theoretically superior to the individual coach scheme because it more rapidly weeds out the culis from the material and thus permits the earlier selection of the team, upon whose members the coaching can be concentrated. The individual coach at best can watch bers the coaching can be concentrated. The individual coach at best can watch but one or two players in a scrimmage. Whereas the assistants of a head coach can watch every player at all times. RUTGERS PLAYS TIE WITH W. & L.

Homer Hazel's Big Toe Saves Manhattan Lads Overwhelm Foster Sanford's Eleven From Defeat.

VICTOR LINE IS STRONG LONG

New Brunswick, Oct. 14.—Poster Sanford's new multiple kick, with Homer Hazel's toe behind it, staved off almost of Washington and Lee to-day and resulted in the elevens deadlooking in a 15 to 13 tie.

Rutgers was weakened by the absence of both regular tackies and Washington and Lee seemed to have an edge on the Jerseymen in the first half. Though Rutgers started with a rush, a series of penalties halted them and they were held for downs on Washington and Lee's 30 yard line.

The Southerners then sprung a big surprise by playing straight down the field for a touchdown. A few minutes hater Hazel kicked a forty yard field goal. On resumption of play the Rutgers came back strong in the second half however. The visitors funded the kickoff on their own 20 yard line and the Rutsers ends pounced on it. Four straight plays then netted Capt. Scarr's eleven a touchdown. With the tane Rutsers ends pounced on it. Four straight plays then netted Capt. Rutgers worked the ball up to Washington and Lee's 25 yard line, where they were held. Hazel then kicked a field goal, the score at 13—12.

Washington and Lee used the forward pass, sinclair tried and succeeded. In the first same period there was no second into the second half, in when the defence stiffened up. Capt. Young and Rutgers worked the basil up to Washington and Lee's 26 yard line, where they were held. Hazel then kicked a field goal, the score at 13—12.
